Explosion Felt Over Thirty Miles Away.

TWELVE PEOPLE KILLED OUTRIGHT

The Communication of a Spark to a Can of Powder Causes the Explosion of a Number of Grinding Houses-Awful Scenes of Devastation Presented-Buildings Razed to the Ground and Only a Few Foundation Stones Left-Wives and Daughters Wildly Seeking Amid the Ruins Fer Loved Ones-Many Missing of Whom No Trace Can Be Found.

WILMINGTON, Del., October 7 .- Several startling explosions in quick succession (some counted five, others seven) at 1:30 p.m. announced to Wilmington a disaster at the Dupont Powder Works on the Brandywine. A rush was made for the telephones, but nothing could be learned beyond vague reports of the damage hastened to the scene and has wired that the whole section of the works known as the "upper yard" is completely wrecked. At least six lives are oot. One of the magazines went off first and the rolling and drying mills near by were set off by the concussion and followed in rapid succession. There were at least seven distinct successive

When the Associated Press representative arrived on the scene he found women and children, wives and sons and daughters of the men employed in the powder manufactory, madly rushing here and there seeking information bout the safety of their loved ones.

The yard in which the mills stood was ings and at some places where buildings had been the only trace left were empty cellars and a few foundation stones.

The little village of Duponts Banks, immediately outside the powder yard, presented a most pitiable appearance. A hundred dwellings were either demolished or badly damaged. Buildings were unroofed and fronts of houses blown out and wrecked. Inside the dwellings, the devastation was complete. Rooms on the ground floors were strewn with broken crockery, crushed stoves, remnants of tables etc.

Every dwelling in the neighborhood is reported as wrecked or unroofed and more or less damaged. Telephone inquiries from Westchester state that the explosion was distinctly heard in that section.

A messenger has just brought in the following dispatch, which shows that the worst has not yet been learned. In the powder mill explosions, ten persons were killed and twenty wounded. Rockland is a complete wreck; none of its houses have been left standing.

Rockland is a village on the Brandywine, fully a mile above the scene of paper mill, owned by the Jessup & Moore Company, and about fifty dwellings, in which chiefly reside mill emthe number of killed and wounded is prise the list." not yet fully ascertained.

The Dupont Powder Mills extend along the Brandywine, chiefly on the west bank and close to the water for about two miles. They are divided into the "upper Hagley" and "lower yards." The former is three miles and the latter five miles from Wilmington.

The report of the damage done at Rockland proves incorrect as to the locality, the name of Rockland being erroneously used for the buildings around what is known locally as the 'upper yard." There are some fifty houses, inhabited by employes of the powder mills, clustered around, and these were all wrecked. The damage to property cannot be thoroughly estimated tonight. The force of the concussion even broke windows in some parts of Wilmington, four or five miles away.

The following is a partial list of the

The dead were all employes of the company and were in and about the mills which exploded. Several work-men are missing and are believed to have been blown into fragments.

The first explosion occurred in one of the packing mills where a workman named Grau was receiving a can of hexagonal powder to be shipped for the use of the United States Government. In some way a spark communicated to the can below and it blew up. Instantly the packing mill exploded and the other mills in the "upper yards," seven or eight in number, lowed at intervals of less than one sec-

All of these, except one, were "rolling mills," in which the ingredients of gun-powder are pulverized by vertical rollers of stone, turning slowly around a center

Immediately after the explosion, a located near the center of the village, took fire. It was a matter of life and took fire. It was a matter of life and death to the whole population that the fire should be extinguished, before it communicated with the powder the building contained. The Dupont fire brigade succeeded in extinguishing the fire. Had the roof fallen, it is doubtful if any man, woman or child in the vicinity would have escaped death or serious injury. serious injury.

STARTS WORK IN THE ENEMY'S COUNTRY.

Makes a Strong Speech in Support of a Protective Tariff and the Provisions of the New Bill.

MILLERSBURG, Ohio, October 7 .- Congressman McKinley opened his campaign in the Sixteenth District here, this evening. This is the county seat and the program of the trip is being ratic strongholds added to his district by the gerrymandering act last winter.

The Major was greeted by a fine audience. He spoke briefly of the gerremarks to a discussion of tariff.

In the course of his remarks he said, There is not an item upon which protective duties have been laid that has not been reduced in price to the people who buy it. The Republican party, fifteen years ago, gave the country free coffee and tea and has now given it free sugar. We have as a result a free and intaxed breakfast table.

"Duties under this bill are lower than those of any bill since 1861. We have reduced duties wherever it would not interfere with or injure home industry and have increased it where the protection of our own manufacturing interests demanded it. The duties on wool have all been made protective. If, in 1883, you farmers of Ohio defeated the Republican party for a reduction of the wool tariff, as Democrats then claimed, t is your duty now to vote for the Republican party, for it has not only re-stored the tariff of 1863, but made it stronger by a high tariff on all substitutes for wool.

DANVILLE, Illinois, October 7 .- The ure. No official business of any character is allowed to intrude itself beneficial to the President is evident by manner in which he bears up under have tendered him at every stop in tion of the perplexing question, Indiana was particularly pleasing to the President. It was a vertable surprise when at the little town of Sullivan, this after-noon, nearly half of the population of the county was found assembled and cheering for a sight of the Chief Executive. The President was forced to yield to the popular demand and made a brief speech, thanking the people heartily for the reception.

Between Vincennes and Sullivan, thirty miles, the fastest run of the trip was made, the distance being covered in 32 minutes.

The principal event of the day was reception at Terra Haute, A stand had been erected and fully 10,000 people were assembled to greet the party. by the whistles of every engine and factory in the city and the noise was deafening. could be quieted. Mayor Daniels welcomed the President to the city and introduced him to the people.

SPEAKS OF LOCAL PROSPERITY.

The President, in responding, said he heartily appreciated this large gathering and the welcome which their kind and animated faces, as well as the words of the mayor, had extended. Terre Haute had always been the home of some of his most cherished personal friends and he was glad to know that city is, in an increasing degree, prosperous and the people contented and happy.
